

ABSTRACT

Methods and apparatuses for adjusting backlight intensity in a display device of a computer system, and compensating with image brightness adjustments via graphics controller color-lookup table to retain a net equivalent level of brightness as perceived by the user when viewing images produced by the graphics controller on the display device.